INTENTIONAL SOCIETIES AND ORDERED ENVIRONMENTS:
IN
THE THEORY AND IDEOLOGY OF PLANNING

by

Paul Reed, Special Lecturer
Trent University
Department of Sociology
Peterborough, Ontario, Canada

The attached bibliography consists of references pertaining to the principles and belief systems of planning of various kinds (social, economic, physical) and at various levels (the community, city, region, and nation). It is premised on the conviction that there are many elements common to all forms of planning as a form of collective rationality, (i.e., as it is carried out within political structure).

Particular attention has been given to urban planning, while virtually none has been given to planning at the institutional level, such as corporate planning and educational planning.

Many monographs and articles have been listed which deal explicitly with assumptions, axioms, and postulates in planning, but a significant number of references have been included because they illustrate or allude to implicit elements in planning theory and practice.

References to the following frequently-cited journals have been abbreviated thus:

- | | |
|-------------------|---|
| A.S.R. | American Sociological Review |
| J.A.I.P. | Journal of the American Institute of Planners |
| J.R.T.P.I. | Journal of the Royal Town Planning Institute |
| J.T.P.I. | Journal of the Town Planning Institute (which became J.R.T.P.I. in 1971) |
